ALL PUFFED OUT

Big Bad Wolf killed in home breaking incident.

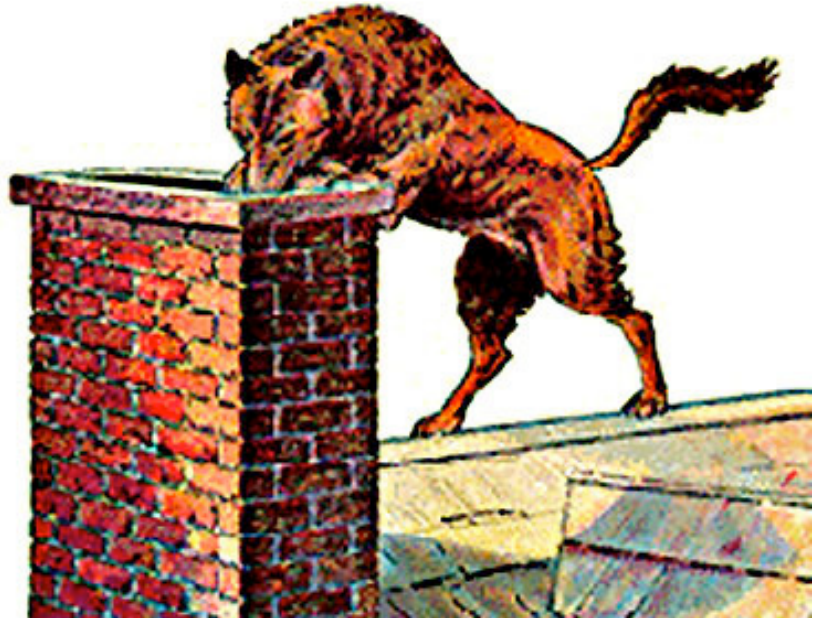

The Big Bad Wolf was put to death today by heroic local woodsman Alan Chopper.

There have been several recent incidents of the wolf impersonating local villagers in order to lure family members to their deaths. The most recent of these was yesterday afternoon, when the wolf apparently stalked young Ruby Riding Hood through the woods and pressured her for information about her grandmother. He then proceeded to devour Grandmother Hood before wearing her clothes, climbing into her bed and attacking poor Ruby herself!

"I was chopping firewood in the clearing behind the house," explained Chopper. "I know old Mrs Hood struggles living on her own, so I like to help out. Then I heard screams. What else could I do? I grabbed me axe and cut the ladies free."

Doctors report that Ruby and her grandmother are a little shaken, but have sustained no serious injuries and will make a full recovery.

The Wolf first appeared in the neighbourhood following an incident in distant Over The Hill. He believed he had made friends with a young boy, Peter, and had a good relationship with humans. However, Peter repeatedly cried "Wolf!" calling the authorities and placing the Wolf's life in danger, until his patience snapped. Peter is believed to be Big Bad Wolf's first victim, after which he fled to Faraway.

Over the last twenty years, Wolf has evaded capture. Police believed an arrest was possible following the 'Three Pigs' debacle three years ago. Readers may remember the tale of brothers Percy, Patrick and Paul, who barely escaped with their lives after Wolf destroyed their homes – which they built themselves! Police chiefs were left scratching their heads when Wolf escaped again.

So today, a great victory for honest people everywhere, who can sleep soundly, walk safely and build solidly without fear of this brutal predator. The Big Bad Wolf's funeral will be held in a private ceremony and he will be buried in an unmarked grave. His family have been informed and request respect at this emotional time.
